Introduction

The 'RESTORE - Provide Social Pathways for Roma People' is a 9-month (1/11/2021 to 31/10/2023) project co-funded by the 'ERASMUS+ KA220 ADU - Cooperation partnership in adult education' programme of the European Union (Project no.: 2021-1-DE02-KA220-ADU-000029489). RESTORE focuses on the need of fostering civic engagement of Roma adults in their local communities, bringing them closer to EU values and ideas of union and diversity on the formulation of a holistic training methodology, from the identification of civic educational models already existed in the EU to the delivery of policy recommendations and proper enhancements of them. The project is going to be implemented in 5 countries with dense Roma populations (Romania, Germany, Greece, North Macedonia and Hungary) and involve few groups of participants:

- Roma adults including those coming from a disadvantaged background;
- Local communities and social partners;
- Policy organizations;
- Adult education providers;
- Other stakeholders related to civic engagement.

The activities of this project include:

- a) Identification of civic educational models for democratic participation of Roma adults;
- b) Designing and delivery of an OER capacity building program tailored to the civic skill gaps of Roma adults: "Social Pathways for civic engagement of Roma adults in the EU";
- c) Delivery of policy suggestions regarding civic engagement of Roma adults at EU level;
- d) Transnational Meetings and Multiplier Events.

In this context, the research at national level on behalf of every implementing partner for identifying the specific country context and the actual needs of Roma adults is of paramount importance. Thus, the report in question is focusing on the North Macedonia framework collecting information both from the desktop research and the field research resulting to national level conclusions and recommendations that will be linked with the capacity building programme of the RESTORE project.

1. The North Macedonian context and state of the act civic engagement of Roma adults in the country

1.1 Statistics and Population

According to the latest official results from the National Census 2022, North Macedonia has a total of 2,097,319 citizens, from which a total of 2,43% or 49,147 are of Roma ethnic background<sup>1</sup> and in the past over 20 years according the last statistical data, the Roma population in North Macedonia is being decreased for 0.22%. The majority of the Roma people living in North Macedonia are Muslim but in the southern part of the country there are Roma people who declare themselves as Orthodox.

The vast majority of Roma are North Macedonian citizens who speak the Macedonian language and over 0.20% of the total number of 2.43% Roma also speak their mother tongue or Romani language.<sup>2</sup>

Other sources such as estimations made by the World Bank claim the number of Roma in North Macedonia to be between 80,000 and 260,000 or approximately 4 to 12% of the total population.

The municipality of Shuto Orizari is the only municipality in the world with majority of Roma people and at the same time the only municipality where Romani is an official language alongside the Macedonian language.

Since the independence of North Macedonia in 1991, the Roma people are being recognized, defined and mentioned in the country's Constitution under Article 78<sup>3</sup>. In 2009, the Government of the Republic of North Macedonia took measures to enlarge inclusion of Romani in the education process.

North Macedonia is the region's leader in respecting the rights of the Romani people. It is the first country in the region with a minister of Romani ethnicity and also has many Romani in high government positions. However, there is still a lot to be done concerning the education and integration of the Roma in North Macedonia.

1.2 Legal Framework

The Strategy for Roma Inclusion 2022 - 2030 has been adopted in accordance with the priorities of the Government program 2020-2024 which relate to ensuring accelerated and sustainable economic growth, higher living standards and quality of life of citizens; quality education accessible to all and full implementation of the Ohrid Framework Agreement. These strategic priorities are directly related to the inclusion of Roma in terms of promoting the position of ethnic communities and ensuring equal treatment and respect for the fundamental rights of all citizens, and in the direction of the Roma community the support is aimed at expanding access and improving quality of education, employment, health, housing and other social services. Policy instruments to achieve these goals include measures for general measures and targeted measures, including affirmative action to prevent or bridge the gap between different communities or a combination of both, with a particular focus on a gender perspective.

The Roma Strategy is prepared in accordance with the EU Strategic Framework for Roma Integration for the period 2021-2030, which promotes equality and socio-economic inclusion of the Roma population at the level of the European Union. The new EU Strategic Framework relates to the Commission's work in other areas, including the recently adopted EU Action Plan<sup>9</sup> against Racism 2020-2025, the EU Victims' Rights Strategy 2021-2025<sup>10</sup> and the EU Gender Equality Strategy 2020-2025.<sup>4</sup>

In July 2019, the Berlin Process adopted the Declaration of the Western Balkan Partners on Roma Integration in the framework of the EU enlargement process. With the adoption of the Declaration, governments pledged to continue to further strengthen efforts to achieve Roma equality and full integration as part of regional co-operation and the European Union accession process. The Declaration envisages achieving specifically defined goals in the areas of employment, education, housing, health care, documentation and the fight against discrimination.<sup>5</sup>

The strategic approach to Roma inclusion, as stated in the new ten-year strategic framework for Roma inclusion, becomes part of the EU enlargement process and part of the acquis, hence the achievements in the implementation of the activities of the national plans are subject to regular screening. In essence, it is the responsibility of the Government to abide by the rules and procedures relating, inter alia, to the inclusion of Roma in respect of fundamental human rights, the protection of minorities, discrimination and the inclusion of Roma, which are included in Chapter 23 - The Judiciary and human rights from the Stabilization and Association Agreement.<sup>6</sup>

The Law on Adult Education regulates the organization, structure, financing and management of the adult education system. Adult education is part of the education system that provides education, training, retraining and learning for adults. Adult education includes formal, non-formal and formal learning. Formal adult education includes: adult primary education, adult secondary education, vocational training, vocational education, technical education and post-secondary adult education, as well as retraining and additional training and adult higher education. Non-formal adult education means organized learning processes aimed at training adults for work, various social activities or personal development. The purpose of adult education is to provide an opportunity to acquire an appropriate level of education for everyone and for all age groups and to enable them to acquire knowledge, skills and attitudes that will be in line with the demands of society and the labor market.

More precisely regarding the above stated Law, Republic of North Macedonia currently collects statistical data on adults who have not been able to terminate or complete their education and according the first information given by the Agency for Employment of North Macedonia, 80% of the job seekers from Roma ethnic background have not completed their whether primary or secondary education. The relevant statistical data is not available currently as most of the job seekers during the submission of the application did not declare to which ethnic community they belong.

In the field of employment, the Macedonian legislation envisages the Law on Employment and Insurance in Case of Unemployment, the Law on Labor Relations which envisage the principle of equal treatment, and explicitly prohibit discrimination between the candidate for employment and the employee. The Labor Law specifically emphasizes the obligation to ensure equal treatment and equal opportunities for women and men. The Law on Protection from Harassment at Work regulates the procedural and material aspects related to harassment at the workplace, as well as protection against discrimination of a worker on the grounds of pregnancy, childbirth and parenthood.

Although unemployment rate in North Macedonia has dropped significantly over the past years, reaching 15.9% in the third quarter of 2021, the Roma unemployment rate has remained unchanged. According to the 2018 social mapping data, the employment rate of Roma is 23%, almost twice lower than the national average, while the unemployment rate of Roma is at a record high of 67%. Among Romani women, the employment rate is 8%. The regional survey "Breaking the cycle of Roma exclusion in the Western Balkans" for 2017 conducted by UNDP and the World Bank shows lower results in terms of employment of Roma versus non-Roma. Approximately one in five Roma aged 15 to 64 was employed in 2017, while among young people, a large number of Roma were not included in employment, qualifications or training in 2017. Although there has been a slight improvement compared to 2011, the gap between Roma and non-Roma is widening.<sup>7</sup>

North Macedonia is in lack of capacity building programs targeted to Roma adults and, exceptions are the National Strategy Action Plans for involvement of Roma women and Capacity building training for self-advocacy for Roma-girls and women and feminist activists, a training organized in recent days by the OSCE, ODIHR Office.

2. Summary of the results from organized focus groups/interviews with professionals

The organized focus group/interviews with professionals, based on the discussions with the 4 professionals, profiled few different types of findings as the interviewed professionals come and have different background on working or training Roma. All of them have over 5 years of experience working as trainers and with the community.

From the focus group with professionals it can be concluded that the focus of their work is the formal participation of Roma adults in several sectors such as employment and education, and the awareness of targeting the level of individual involvement of Roma adults in the processes of action in society is developing flow. From the discussion it was ascertained that most of the Roma community is informed and at the same time interested when engaging in any activities if they have some benefit from them.

This project has been funded with support from the European Commission.

This publication reflects the views only of the author, and the Commission cannot be held responsible for any use which may be made of the information contained therein.

The professionals stated that despite the experience they have gained during the period of work as professionals or trainers, most of them have experience in educational or capacity building and communication skills training, which are also helpers in social processes to understand the concept of civic participation.

Professionals categorically stated that they do not have adequate guidelines, resources as manuals for appropriate retraining on the topic of civic engagement, and the terminology itself raises the dilemma of its meaning and what is included in the term civic engagement or involvement.

According to the discussion, it can be concluded that the Roma are not yet active actors in some processes and at the same time they are not part of certain decision-making processes, at local or national level.

The answers offered include the passivity of the Roma, self-interest, the need for proactivity of the community and the understanding of the concept of civic engagement, but at the same time the guilt can be foreseen in the system, the stigmatization towards Roma, the discouraging non-Roma narratives in decision-making institutions towards Roma.

All professionals involved in the discussion saw a common finding that Roma inclusion is only enhanced when there is a project or program intended or binding on the Roma community.

It was also concluded and is relevant to be stated as a key finding the need or lack of certain skills among professionals in order to improve the quality of training and encourage the civic engagement of Roma and increase their interest. Professionals possess skills suitable for civic engagement training, but consider it really necessary to have appropriate training with several modules on various key topics such as:

- lobbying and advocacy skills;
- learning policies and advocating for them;
- setting factor positions with the possibility of influencing the creation of policies.

As a conclusion from the focus group with professionals, it was stressed the inevitable need for appropriate methodology or preparation of training to differentiate the terminology and also to ensure adequate civic engagement of the Roma population in North Macedonia, despite the implementation of certain projects in the past.

This project has been funded with support from the European Commission.

This publication reflects the views only of the author, and the Commission cannot be held responsible for any use which may be made of the information contained therein.

In order to increase the trust in the system, to reduce the passivity of the community for various reasons and to increase the awareness at every level, trainings are needed that will contribute to increasing the importance of civic engagement and will also increase the community awareness regarding general trends and non-formal education which has many times proved to be more important than formal.

3. Summary of results from Organized focus groups/interviews with Roma adults

During the interviews held with the focus group with Roma adults, primarily it was discussed the definition and the meaning of the civic engagement context as all of the participants had a different point of view of the context.

All participants were unanimous that the terminology is not sufficiently known and that no measures are taken for it by a number of non-governmental organizations or institutions, both locally and nationally.

All respondents consider that the need to develop an association (their terminology) or appropriate training, workshops that will represent the problems of the Roma community is inevitable and believe that such advocacy is and is a model of civic participation.

At the same time, there is a deficit of solidarity, because solidarity action is one of the links of civic participation. This did not include self-advocacy, but solidarity action for the greater good of the community.

The respondents confirm the fact that the Roma population in the municipalities in the Republic of Northern Macedonia face many obstacles and problems in the processes of civic participation, and as one of them they single out:

- access to institutions; and
- cooperation with institutions at local and national level.

After the focus group, the respondents concluded that the cooperation with the local self-government or the institutions exists only when Roma are included in certain job positions.

At the same time, the community is insufficiently informed about the concept of civic participation, and one of the reasons is poverty, illiteracy and social status.

As a conclusion and recommendations, it was concluded that the need for a series of trainings for adults for civic participation is inevitable, in order to increase information, involvement and offer appropriate tools that would be available for the community to know where to find the solution and how to reap the benefits of civic participation in every sphere. There is a unanimous need for trained people who will initiate activities and changes and increase proactivity in civic engagement.

All this leads to solving the everyday problems faced by the Roma community such as:

This project has been funded with support from the European Commission.

- Discrimination;
- Stigmatization;
- Non-acceptance and lack of support at the institutional level;
- Non-representation in the processes and policy making at local and national level;
- Deficit of employees;
- Appropriate definition of the criteria for employment of Roma (they should apply not only to Roma but also to non-Roma).

Regarding the educational background of the professionals, most of them or 75% of the respondents have completed tertiary/higher education, and 25% have completed postgraduate studies. When it comes to gender balance, 5 of the participants were or declared themselves as women and 5 of the participants declared themselves as men. From the total number of respondents, 75% belong to the Roma community and 25% are Macedonians.

In terms of how all respondents declare themselves and what their employment status is, one of them have stated that he/she worked as an educator of Roma adults, 5 are professionals who worked with Roma adults, one is staff with experience in working with Roma adults, and 1 declared themselves as education advisors, 1 executive director and 2 project coordinators.

There are also those type of professionals who have taken part in social and cultural support training or a total of 25% (2 participants), and 50% of the total number of the professionals have been directly involved in democratic and inclusion support trainings. Therefore, it can be concluded that 3 of the professional respondents were involved in several thematic trainings in support of Roma.

5 of the participants are involved and engaged in such trainings for support from 3 to 5 years now, and 5 of them have an experience and have been engaged over 7 years.

Most of the respondents or 62.5% according the results of the questionnaire are not aware of any civic training programs in the community, where the other 37.5% are very well aware, though consider and state the lack of such civic training programs. ## 6. Conclusions and recommendations: Skill gaps and need identification

Civic participation as a concept is an essential component of a healthy democratic society. Engaged citizenship, ie. citizens who are actively involved in the betterment of their communities and their country are of great benefit to civil society and a key indicator of healthy communities, a democratic state and satisfied citizens.

Active and engaged citizens are those who are connected to their community, feel responsible for the betterment of their community, participate in civic initiatives and volunteer and above all believe that they can change something.

The Roma population is in deficit of adequate staff for training on civic engagement, and it follows that the more people are satisfied with their community, the stronger and stronger the sense of belonging. The great need for raising awareness of the concept of civic participation at a higher level and the interest and training of individuals who will act in spreading the concept is passed as a need.

It comes to the conclusion that more educated Roma are more aware of the importance of civic participation and the benefit of it. Hence the need to increase their own satisfaction through the impact in every sphere of society, which can only be offset by appropriate workshops and trainings from the NGO sector.
